Program

Drawing on Brené Brown's research and experiences as a leadership coach, Superintendent Mike McMann has received training to facilitate Dare to Lead™ learning opportunities. With his colleague Natalie Morris as co-facilitator, they will incorporate the Dare to Lead™ content with their application of their learning and experiences as a system education leader in Alberta. The two-day opportunity will provide a focus on this content and time for individual and group reflection and engagement.

Key ideas that will be facilitated at the two day workshop, and as provided by the Blink list summary of the book, include:

1. Far from being a weakness, vulnerability is an essential asset for innovation.
2. Courageous leaders give and solicit honest feedback.
3. Core values anchor and guide daring leadership.
4. Trust is an important and multifaceted aspect of our working relationships.
5. Learning how to fail helps us to be brave.
6. Perfectionism holds us back from self-improvement and true courage.

Dare to Lead™ (2018) is written by Brené Brown, who is a research professor at the University of Houston. Her books have frequently been best sellers and her TED Talk, "The Power of Vulnerability", has over 30 million views and is one of the top five most-viewed TED talks of all time. More information about this work is available at <https://brenebrown.com/>

Presenters

Mike McMann

Michael McMann has over 25 years in the Alberta education system and grew up in rural Alberta. He has a passion for research and moving the dial on every kid in their learning. Mike is a Dare to Lead facilitator and has valued spending time with Brené Brown. Mike believes training with Brené Brown and the Dare to Lead learning has had the single biggest impact on him personally and professionally. The district has seen a major decline in requirement for student discipline and a more connected staff through this training.

Natalie Morris

Natalie Morris is the Supervisor of Learning Services – Connectivity for Fort Vermilion School Division. She grew up in northern Alberta and has spent over 20 years in education. Natalie is passionate about connection and the belief that everyone is doing the best they know how. She has been a principal in numerous schools before taking on a district role.
